Sorry it took me a couple of days to get these comments to you. Perhaps we can discuss Monday.

Jay,

Sorry for the delay. Yehuda and I can be in Cincinnati late afternoon October 24. Perhaps we can meet with you and set up a call with all parties a few days after that.

With regard to the language changes for the water quality analysis:

"No opportunistic pathogens, heavy metals, VOCs, or other water contaminations were detected in this study and the water produced by the Water Gen 350 atmospheric water generator was safe for human consumption. The water produced meets or exceeds EPA water standards."

"Any water exposed to ambient air and not stored in a sealed container has the potential for microbial growth. Consequently, water storage containers should always include an anti microbial application, such as chlorine or Ozone."

And our comments regarding the LCA:

Any mention of Ecolobblue is confusing at best since this company never produced any equipment that confirmed their advertised abilities. The company no longer functions.

We would also appreciate using our advertised production capabilities of 5,000 liters per day in the calculations and not the 3,000 liters per day that was used. We actually produce 6,000 liters per day, but 5,000 liters is fair.

Let's discuss.

Ed
